

Question 9: Isn't salvation unfair to good people than bad people? Answer: That's the wrong question, because no one is good. There is no such thing as "good people" or even a "good person." Mankind has been sadly brainwashed by this world into thinking that everyone is generally a good person deep down inside. That is the problem. They have created their own ethics on what good is. They have been comparing themselves with someone worse than them. They have limited goodness in their own measurement rather than God's. They do not realize one "little" sin is something really wicked. They do not seriously think that what God sees as sin is actually sin at all. Even some things they see is good is actually heinously evil in the eyes of God. The Lord is just, and He will make sure that every sin is fairly paid for. Both lost and saved people will face the proper punishment they deserve.
